

Adjudication for Engineers

Adjudication is a common dispute resolution process especially in the construction industry in many places. It is meant to be an efficient means of dispute resolution process as compared with arbitration and litigation.

In Hong Kong, following the proposed Security of Payment Legislation (SOPL), it is expected that adjudication will become increasingly common in Hong Kong construction industry.

Course content

- The basic concept of adjudication
- The process of adjudication
- The differences among adjudication, arbitration and litigation, and some common engineering contractual clauses
